

The investigation on the case of the former highway toll collectors storm Directorate-General of the Personnel Administration's (DGPA) office by Taipei District Prosecutors Office was concluded today. The outlines are as follows:

I The result of investigation

1. The defendant Sun and the other 35 defendants : A person who has no reason to enter a dwelling house or structure of another, the adjacent or surrounding grounds, or a vessel belonging to another(Article 306 of the Criminal Code) : Present an indictment.
2. The defendants Sun, Wang, Guo, ZHANG, ZHUANG : A person who by violence or threats causes another to do something which he has no obligation to do or who prevents another from doing a thing that he has the right to do(Article 304 of the Criminal Code) : Present an indictment.
3. The defendants Huang, Guo, ZHANG : Article 302, 304,354 of the Criminal Code: Make the ruling not to prosecute because the suspicion of an offense having been committed is insufficient.
4. The defendants Sun : Article 140 of the Criminal Code : Make the ruling not to prosecute because the suspicion of an offense having been committed is insufficient.

II Fact

Former highway toll collectors at 10 am on 13th May 2015 broke into the office of the Directorate-General of Personnel Administration in Taipei because a protest against their severance payments and the unfair treatment they said they have received from their former employer, and demanded that the government pay more attention to workers' rights.

They managed to lock the office from the inside and obstruct police officers to get inside with shields and sofas. Police officers were finally able to enter the offices by removing the front door from its hinges. The police then rounded up the the defendant Sun and the other 35 defendants

III .Article of the law violated

1. The article of law charged with as cited for all of the defendants are in violation of the provisions of section I , Article 306 of the Criminal Code.
2. The article of law charged with as cited of the defendant Sun, Wang, Guo, ZHANG, ZHUANG are in violation of I of Article 304 of the Criminal Code.